- There are no Soviet troops in the Lublin district except a few officers and 25X1 other ranks at a military post where checks are made of troop and freight transports. The few Polish troops in Lublin are housed in the old Russian cavalry barracks at the edge of the town, on the road to Pulawy (R52/Q69).
  - There are neither civilian nor military air raid precautions in Lublin.
  - The identity cards in current use are still the Kennkarten issued by the 3. German occupation authorities. It is also usual to have a card issued from one's place of work. Checks are only likely to occur in the course of a journey, and then usually only the baggage is checked. There are no spot checks on the streets, in shops, or in hotels, except in the six kilometer frontier zone.
  - Suspecting clandestine correspondence in parcels from abroad, the authorities 4. have tightened postal security. Parcels which have been examined by customs are now re-wrapped in new boxes and paper. Contact with families and friends abracd is carefully checked. In January 1952 forms had to be filled in saying what contacts people had abroad, the degree of relationship, the occupation of the persons abroad, and why they have not been repatriated. The forms had to be supplied with a photo and signed.
  - Lublin was very little damaged by the war and the situation of the municipal 5 *. offices had not been changed (sic).
  - There is a State Airplane Factory in Lublin (formerly Plage and Laskiewicz), 6: two factories for agricultural machinery and some small leather tanneries. is planned to build a canned meat factory.

The collectivization of agriculture crased completely in 1951. There are a few kpikhozes in the frontier region from which the Ukrainian population had been evacuated, but it is believed that these concerns are not working satisfactorily. There are, however, numerous state farms.
